I'm on a roll on the don't text and drive thing, sorry.

In fact, I could do a whole web site on texting/surfing and driving and I've actually contemplated starting one -- but then reality hits: There's no way I'd have time for that. I struggle to get new content up on SolarChargedDriving.Com as it is.

So, I'll continue to use SolarChargedDriving.Com as an outlet to fight the crucial battle against the texting/surfing and driving epidemic. And, of course, solar-charged or not, a 4,000 pound vehicle moving at high rates of speeds is a deadly weapon, one whose navigation requires 100 percent of our attention all of the time.

The texting & driving epidemic

Texting/surfing while driving truly is an epidemic. Take a look around at other drivers around you and you can't miss this basic fact (and it's way, way, way bigger a problem than doing make-up, eating while driving, etc.).

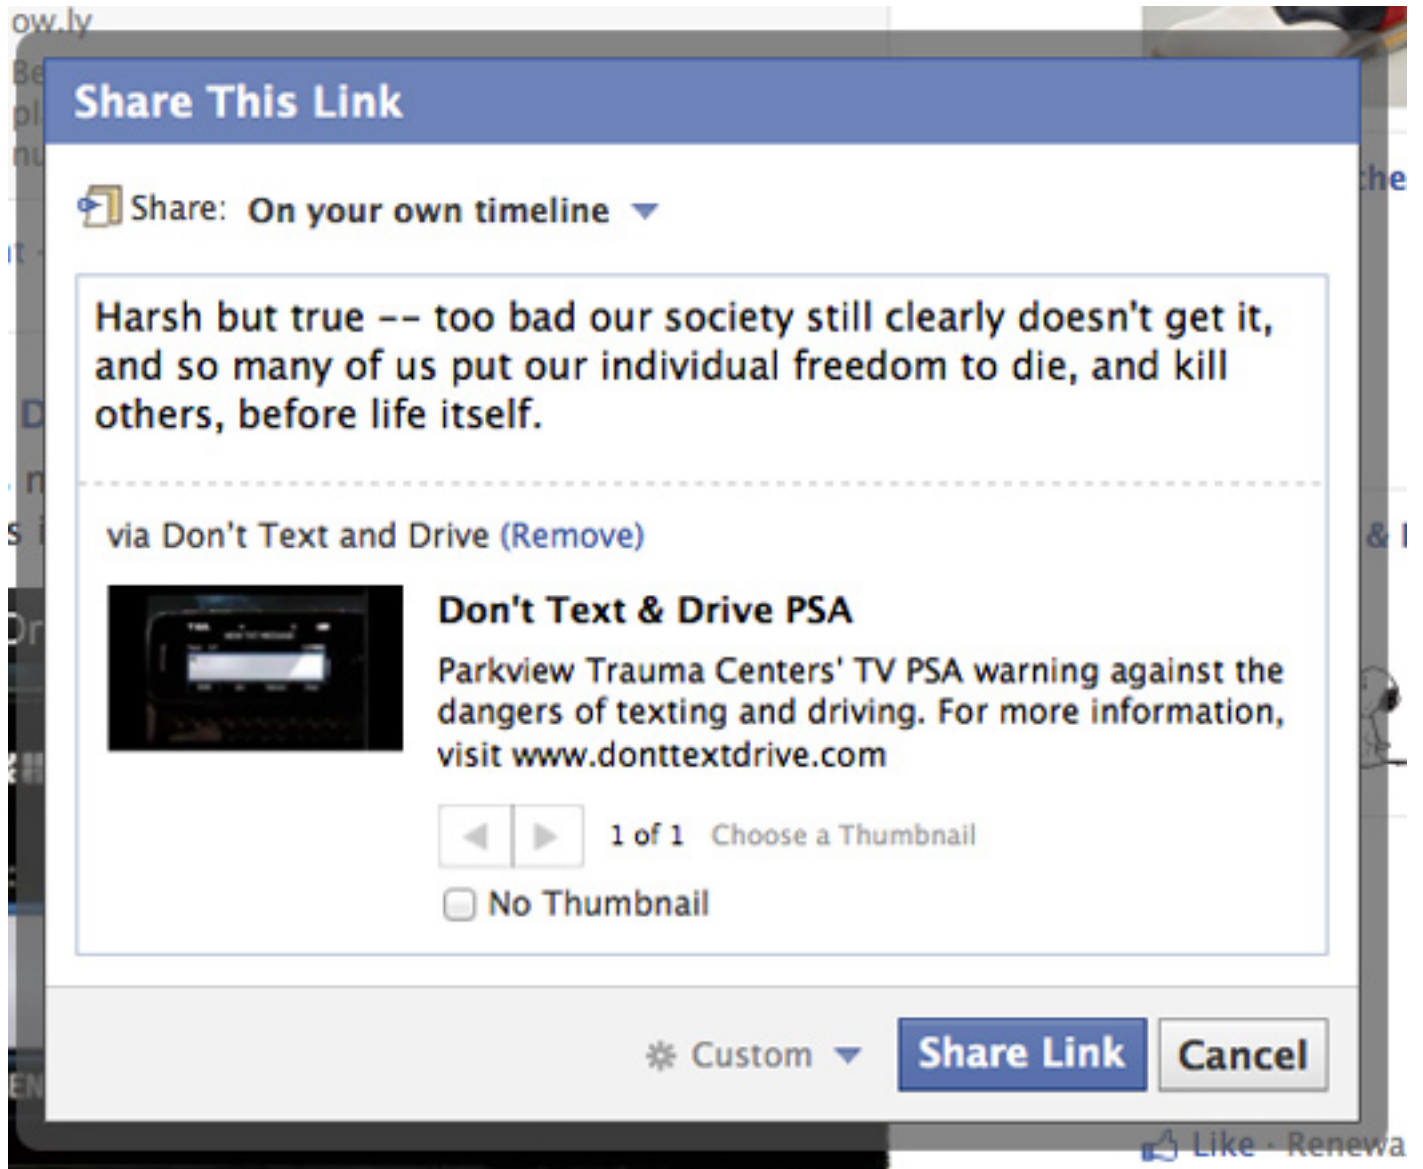

I urge you to watch the 30 second video above (even if you're thinking you don't want to -- I thought that too, to be honest; but I did watch it). Then, share it with others. I did, as you can see by the screen shot below.

The message is clear. And it couldn't be more important. It's a matter of life and death.

Harsh but true -- too bad our society still clearly doesn't get it, and so many of us put our individual freedom to die, and kill others, before life itself.
